Foreword

This directory has been prepared by the Minority Business Development unit of the Industrial Development Division of the Engineering Experiment Station as part of the Division's effort to develop a data base on minority owned and operated business in the state of Georgia.

Minority businesses in the state have not received special attention by EES in the past. However, due to increased public interest in minority business and its potential importance to the state's economy, it was felt that a compilation of information about its status was needed, thereby enabling the Station to render meaningful services to this segment of Georgia's economy.

This study is the beginning of a series of anticipated continuing reports that will be forthcoming, providing data, analysis, and recommendations related to the growth and development of minority business and industry. It is foreseen that this study will be the basis for establishing specialized assistance in several areas which are related to business and industrial development, such as community development, manpower development, and industrial management.

Comments and suggestions regarding the development of future studies are welcomed.

Ross W. Hammond, Chief
Industrial Development Division
ENGINEERING EXPERIMENT STATION

Preface

This report represents a beginning effort to compile a listing of minority owned and operated businesses in Georgia. The study was designed to survey those businesses, both industrial and commercial, employing four or more persons. In the metropolitan area of Atlanta, the listing is restricted to businesses with four or more employees that are either manufacturing concerns or commercial firms which can provide a service to other businesses. A comprehensive list was not compiled because it would merely duplicate existing published lists. However, to provide information not readily available elsewhere, businesses in smaller metropolitan and rural areas that employ fewer than the designated number are included.

The purpose of the study was to provide the Industrial Development Division (IDD) with initial data on the problems and technical assistance needs which hinder minority businesses in their endeavor to become competitive. The collected data would indicate what types of businesses exist and what kinds of management and technical assistance are needed. This would enable IDD to ascertain where to focus its services to best aid the development of minority enterprises.

The directory is divided into two sections. Section I, which is organized by counties, provides an alphabetical listing of minority enterprises in each county where such a list could be secured. Each business is identified by name, address, and type of activity, and where information is available, the name of the owner is given. Establishments with four or more employees are indicated with an asterisk (*). Section II breaks out the manufacturing and construction firms in separate listings. Since retailers and service firms constitute the bulk of the directory listings, they are listed only once -- in the county section. At the beginning of each section, general observations are made about the age range of the companies, the market range of business activity, the manner of capitalization, and the need for technical assistance or the companies' use of technical assistance resources within the state.

The study generalizes about the nature of minority business since this is the first in what is anticipated to be a series of studies in this area.

Data for the directory were collected by obtaining listings of minority businesses from public and private agencies as well as business associations, civil rights organizations, community action agencies, chambers of commerce, and county licensing agencies. The up-to-dateness of the total list was not thoroughly confirmed by IDD; however, efforts were made to randomly check the entries, with special attention given to those with four or more employees. Thus, it is felt that this list is approximately 85% current.

From the total number of minority businesses having four or more employees, a random selection was made for the purpose of conducting face-to-face interviews to obtain opinions about the development, expansion, and assistance needs of this segment of businessmen. Questionnaires were mailed to all companies selected for the sample, and these participants were contacted later for personal interview by IDD's field staff. Instructions were given to request specific information when responses were vague and unclear. Samplings were scattered throughout counties in the northwestern, eastern, east central, southern, and southeastern sections of Georgia, covering the areas having the greatest concentration of the minority population in the state.

STATE OF GEORGIA
MINORITY BUSINESS SURVEY

Section I
GENERAL FINDINGS

Section I
GENERAL FINDINGS

The overall findings of the survey of minority business in Georgia parallel data collected about minority businesses nationally and regionally. That is:

- (1) Minorities own and operate only a small percentage of the existing businesses operating in the state.
- (2) The majority of these businesses are the corner store, "Mom and Pop" type ventures.
- (3) They are more likely to be a service or retail type enterprise meeting the needs of a restricted neighborhood or community.
- (4) Industrial and relatively sophisticated business ventures are more likely to be located in urban areas than in rural or semi-rural areas.
- (5) Those firms with the capability of employing four or more employees are generally located in or next to metropolitan areas.

The study provided IDD with a knowledge of 214 minority firms employing four or more persons. These 214 firms are concentrated in 31 counties. Approximately 50% of them are located in five counties: Fulton, Chatham, Clarke, Lowndes, and Richmond.

This study identified 1,850 minority businesses active in the state. This figure, however, does not represent the total number of businesses operating in the state, but only those identified for the purpose of the study. In large metropolitan areas, the study excluded some commercial businesses, those with less than four employees and those which were unable to provide contractual services to other businesses or agencies. In rural areas and smaller metropolitan areas, the study included a more comprehensive listing of the businesses in the area. The study's criteria were altered for smaller communities because it was felt that the rural and smaller metropolitan areas needed a more comprehensive listing since few had a listing available to the business community and professional organizations.

Only 70 counties out of 159 in the state had compiled lists available that could be used in conducting this study. Time did not permit identification of minority businesses in counties where lists were unavailable.

Of the 1,850 businesses that were identified, 16 were manufacturing firms, 41 were special or general contractors (builders, plumbers, painters, etc.), and 1,793 were commercial (retail and service).

Some 214 of the 1,850 firms had four or more employees. Thirty of the 214 firms were selected randomly for interviews to gain some insight into the problems and needs facing these businessmen and to obtain their opinions regarding the need for and use of management and technical assistance. The selection of this group for interviewing was made because the researchers felt that it would be businesses of this type, those employing four or more, that would be more likely to expand, survive, or have a greater need for management and technical assistance.

The following are general observations made from analysis of the interviews regarding minority businessmen's feelings about the development of minority business, technical and management assistance, financial assistance, and other relevant areas. A more detailed discussion of their comments will follow in Section II.

Interviews reveal a growing interest in development of more businesses and in expanding existing businesses in both rural and urban areas.

More of the businesses that were interviewed were established during the 1960's and 1970's than in the 1940's or 1950's. Whether this is a result of the increased activities of the federal government in providing relatively more opportunities for minorities to enter the business field cannot be substantiated from the data. However, it is the opinion of the author that there is a relationship. Anti-poverty programs provided more opportunities for minorities to become managers of business enterprises than previously, thereby stimulating an interest in self-employment. Present federal programs are, to a degree, continuing to encourage economic development and business ownership.

Rural areas tend to have fewer technical assistance resources available to them than urban areas. Significant, also, is the fact that businessmen in rural areas seem less aware of existing management and technical assistance resources than urban businessmen. However, the needs for management and technical assistance in both areas are parallel. Nearly all urban businessmen interviewed expressed a need for management and technical assistance, whereas only those rural and semi-rural businessmen anticipating expanding into related or non-related businesses felt the need for this service. Nearly all businessmen, urban and rural, indicated they were unable to purchase quality technical assistance in the open market.

Data from the manufacturing enterprises reveal that, except for the burial vault manufacturers, these ventures are recent endeavors by minorities. The oldest manufacturing business interviewed was established in 1959, while the youngest was established in 1972. Comparatively, the oldest minority retail or service business interviewed was established in 1942.

All manufacturing and most construction enterprises interviewed operate as corporations, while a majority of the retail and service businesses operate as sole proprietorships. In a few instances, construction ventures have moved from sole proprietorships to a corporation structure; however, in the retail and service ventures, this movement has rarely occurred.

Contractors generally are engaged in small independent jobs or work as part of a large white general contractor or builder force. Rarely, with the exception of one interview, have they independently managed significant work of sizable magnitude on their own.

The most prevalent problem confronting minority businessmen interviewed, approximately 50%, is the difficulty of obtaining the necessary capital to enter business or to expand an existing business. Most retail and service minority businesses interviewed entered business with their own capital without assistance from a bank or the Small Business Administration. In recent years, however, more businesses have turned to SBA direct and guaranteed loans as an aid in entering business. This relationship only began to flourish during the 1960's.

The second most prevalent problem indicated by all groups -- retailers, manufacturers, and construction firms -- is obtaining reliable, dependable, and skilled personnel. Of the 50% who felt that there was a problem in obtaining employees, it should be noted that half felt their problems related to the scarcity of reliable and dependable employees, but that generally sufficient manpower resources were available. The other half of the businesses felt that there were insufficient manpower resources in the state or their local area. Yet, only one firm had utilized state and/or federal manpower agencies in attempting to secure employees. None had utilized school graduates or enrollees in state or federal manpower training programs.

Only a few businesses interviewed (four) presently have or at one time have had government contracts. All the companies interviewed which were suited to contract work expressed the desire to obtain this kind of business.

Information gathered from interview schedules indicate that only a small number of minority businesses are able to employ four or more workers. Quality management and technical assistance is desperately needed in rural and semi-rural areas. Additionally, there is a growing interest in establishing new firms and expanding existing businesses. The marketing range of existing businesses is mostly local, with a few minority concerns servicing the regional market.

It appears to the authors that if concentrated efforts are made to identify and stimulate persons seeking business opportunities and if sufficient management and technical assistance is made available, the state's minority businessmen will increase the size and quality of their businesses and expand into more profitable enterprises.

Section II
FINDINGS BY TYPE OF BUSINESS

Section II

FINDINGS BY TYPE OF BUSINESS

Part I. Retailers and Service Firms

Since retail and service firms form the vast majority of the entries in this directory, they are not repeated in this section. Nevertheless, several comments about the general characteristics of this group of businesses are appropriate here.

The majority of the retail and service businesses identified in this study employ less than four persons. These businesses generally are proprietorship operations. They serve, for the most part, local neighborhoods and towns. Some, however, serve areas as wide as the county where they are located or parts of the adjoining county. None are chain operations. The majority of these commercial enterprises had never used the technical assistance programs available under state and federal government sponsorship, and few knew of their existence or how to obtain services.

About half of the retail businessmen interviewed expressed a desire to expand (enlarge) their businesses, and felt that they could utilize good technical assistance when they were ready.

Of the businesses selected to participate in the interviews, the oldest was established in 1942 and the most recent business was established in 1972. A considerable number of these businesses were established during the 1960's, providing some speculation that there is a relationship between the upsurge of government activities concerning equal opportunities of minorities to enter this field during this period.

Section II
FINDINGS BY TYPE OF BUSINESS

Part II. Manufacturers

There are 16 identifiable minority manufacturing firms in the state. The majority of these firms produce burial vaults. Cut and sew firms are the second largest group of manufacturers. There are one cosmetic manufacturer, a paint manufacturer, and one electronic equipment manufacturer.

The personnel forces employed by the above group of businesses range from 47 to seven.

The oldest manufacturing firm interviewed is 14 years old, established in 1959, and the youngest is one year old, established in 1972.

Most of these firms are optimistic about their future and indicate a desire to diversify and expand in 1973 or 1974.

The marketing range of these businesses is presently limited, extending generally within the southeastern region or locally. Only one firm produces products for the national market.

The products manufactured by these firms are produced for businesses in the private sector. Few presently have government contracts, although all expressed an interest in obtaining them.

Most manufacturing firms, with the exception of the burial vault companies, are located in urban communities. Therefore, they are confronted with high property taxes, high wage expenses, and highly competitive manpower problems, thereby making it difficult to initiate and maintain consistently profitable operations.

The most common problem facing these firms is adequate sources of reliable, conscientious employees. The second-ranking problem is difficulty in obtaining adequate capital to maintain efficient operations.

Management and technical assistance is needed by these firms in the areas of management, accounting, and training. Only one firm interviewed indicated that it had no need for technical assistance in the above areas. Most of the newer manufacturing firms had knowledge of technical assistance resources available through various government and private programs and had, at some time, utilized their services.

All acknowledged the value of technical assistance and 90% indicated that they would be unable to purchase good technical assistance if the above services were not made available without charge to the company.

Section II
FINDINGS BY TYPE OF BUSINESS

Part III. Construction Firms

The largest number of contractors is located in the Fulton County area; Clarke County has the second highest number.

Few of the contractors outside the Atlanta area have utilized technical assistance programs. However, they indicate that they are in need of this service.

The largest problem mentioned by the group interviewed dealt with their inability to obtain adequate financing for construction jobs and their inability to meet the requirements necessary to bid on large building jobs.
